MXOtech Introduces Stress-Free Technology For Businesses

Chicago, IL, October 15, 2007 – MXOtech, Inc. has eliminated 95% of technology emergencies for their clients, and promises to deliver this same high level of service to other companies. According to its business acumen, achieving this type of success has been the result of one underrated concept: getting to know the clients.

In 2006, MXOtech, a Chicago-based technology consulting, networking and staffing firm, opened its doors with a distinct purpose: to provide businesses of all sizes with technology solutions that are customized for their environment. The one major difference in the way MXOtech operates: all clients are privy to a maintenance program.

“We truly believe that in being proactive, instead of reactive, our clients will experience significantly less problems and have that peace of mind they deserve. Our maintenance programs are designed around the client’s environment; so it ensures systems are stable and secure at all times,” says Joanna Sobran, President of MXOtech. “Our clients depend on their systems to do many things; most importantly, to protect their assets. The maintenance programs safeguard these assets against loss, damage and theft.”

For MXOtech, a company formed between two of Chicago’s most debonair entrepreneurs, developing successful partnerships begins with a one-on-one assessment of the client’s current technology environment, followed by recommendations based on more than 20 years of professional and personal experience. And that includes service after the sale, even in what most would consider inopportune times.

“Whether it’s the weekend, daytime or evening, our main goal is to be there for our clients. My partner, Mike Dugan, and I have literally set down our forks in the middle of dinner to help a client. If that means we have to drive out to their location, or walk them through an issue over the phone, we make ourselves available to clients when and where they need us. It’s all about providing convenience along with confidence,” says Sobran.

And that’s exactly what MXOtech has become recognized for inside the Chicago-land area and even nationwide. In fact, when companies are looking for I.T. professionals to fill deficits in their staff or to complete a short-term project, MXOtech provides all the staffing services that save time and energy, such as: testing, background checks, and interviewing.

MXOtech offers businesses of all sizes a full range of I.T. services. With its focus on advancing technology through close working relationships, MXOtech has quickly established a distinguishable advantage throughout the business marketplace.
